Market Update and Performance Summary

The ABL financings which Tenk Investment Limited participates in through the BasePoint Income Solutions Evergreen Offshore Fund L.P. (the "Fund") portfolio generated a weighted average coupon of 13.9% as of December 31, 2025. These financings earned an estimated QTD return of 2.2% and YTD return of 9.6%, net of fees and expenses. Since inception, Tenk Investment Limited has earned an estimated 11.2% net of fees and expenses.[1]

During the fourth quarter, the U.S. economy remained resilient while market participants continued to be positioned for a constructive environment. Equity markets advanced mildly and changes in treasury yields reflected confidence in further interest rates cuts without a recession. While the S&P 500 rose ~2.7%, buoyed by earnings that were in-line with expectations, small caps also finished higher (the Russell 2000 was up ~2.2%), implying that monetary easing is expected to provide future support to smaller companies who are generally more interest rate sensitive.[2, 3]

Fixed income tells a similar story; the Federal Reserve delivered its third rate cut of 2025 and signaled that short-term rates were approaching neutral. Since the 10-year Treasury yield was comparatively stable, the 2s/10s curve moved from ~56 basis points at the start of the quarter to ~71 basis points by the end of the quarter.[4] These moves were accompanied by a meaningful shift in policy expectations for 2026; forecasts of roughly two 25-basis-point cuts in 2026 at the beginning of the quarter revised to expectations of zero to one cut.[5] Additionally, a ~5.8% increase in the Bloomberg Commodity Index (driven primarily by broad strength in metals) suggests that inflation may surprise the market to the upside in 2026.[6]

We frequently write about the differences between Main Street and Wall Street. During the fourth quarter, conditions on Main Street were mixed as aggregate consumer spending remained steady despite subdued consumer confidence.[7, 8]

Importantly, Basepoint's borrowers continue to see unchanged credit performance. We believe this is due to the continued employment availability for blue-collar workers.[9] There are increasing anecdotes about the dichotomy between the outlook for white-collar and blue-collar workers. As Jensen Huang (NVIDIA CEO) recently said, "The skilled craft segment of every economy is going to see a boom… You're going to have to be doubling and doubling and doubling every single year."[10] Similarly, Jim Farley (Ford CEO) recently said, "Hiring an entry worker at a tech company has fallen 50% since 2019… Artificial intelligence is gonna replace literally half of all white-collar workers in the U.S."[11] Basepoint's borrowers primarily support blue-collar workers: mechanics, plumbers, nurses and other professionals whose skills remain in high demand. According to the Deep Future Analytics' shared pool data for consumer loans, bureau score adjustments indicate that performance for the Subprime universe, the sector of the market BasePoint's borrowers have exposure to, is materially better overall than the Near-prime, Prime and even Super-prime segments.[12]

On the small business side, sentiment improved modestly during the quarter.[13] This was likely due to decreased pressure on input costs and expectations for more manageable interest rates moving forward.[14] Small businesses should be one of the largest beneficiaries of any economic acceleration that occurs on account of monetary easing. It will be important to monitor confidence within this cohort as a potential early indicator of increased economic velocity.

Although it was not a fourth quarter event, it is important to comment briefly on President Trump's proposal to impose a temporary 10% interest rate cap for credit cards.[15] While 2026 is an election year and politics can be unpredictable, we view the odds of restricting all forms of credit to be low, even if enacted for banks. As Jamie Dimon (JPMorgan CEO) recently said, "You'd have to have a drastic reduction of the credit card business…it would remove credit from 80% of Americans."[16] Regardless of one's political views, many consumers simply do not qualify for unsecured rates anywhere near 10% and would likely lose access to credit under such a plan.[17] Having said that, if only banks were impacted, BasePoint's borrowers would likely be large beneficiaries.

During the quarter, Commercial/Small Business Financings decreased from 36% to 28% of the portfolio while Consumer Lending Financings decreased from 51% to 28% of the portfolio; loans relating to Other Asset Types (i.e. not Consumer or Commercial/Small Business) increased from 13% to 43%.

BasePoint's overall pipeline remains active; our focus remains on generating durable, risk-adjusted income from financings secured by short-duration cash flows, guided by fundamentals rather than movements in the financial markets. Our strategy has historically been well insulated from macroeconomic volatility and we believe this dynamic will continue. All loans in the portfolio continue to pay principal and interest as scheduled.

In December 2025, BP PMKN LLC ("BP PMKN"), a wholly-owned subsidiary of BasePoint Capital III LLC, provided interim bridge financing (the "Bridge Financing") to its wholly owned acquisition vehicle, IPF Parent Holdings Limited ("UK Bidco") for the pending acquisition of IPF. Under the UK Takeover Code, a bidder must demonstrate that it has sufficient financial resources to implement the offer by the time a firm intention to make an offer is announced. This UK process of a deal's "cash confirmation" is typically satisfied through committed financing arrangements from banks or other institutions or by having funds readily available (for example, cash on hand or placed in escrow). To satisfy these requirements, BP PMKN funded an escrow account on behalf of UK Bidco in the amount of $549,602,200 to satisfy "cash confirmation" requirements. The funding was documented through two instruments (i) a $274,801,100 USD-denominated note issued by UK Bidco (the "Eurobond") and (ii) a $274,801,100 secured promissory note issued by BP PMKN. BasePoint expects to refinance the Bridge Financing in full at or shortly prior to the closing of the acquisition. The Fund will have the option, but will not be obligated, to participate in the permanent financing of the acquisition. If the acquisition does not close, the funds in the escrow account will be released from the escrow account and returned to BP PMKN.

BasePoint previously provided a senior secured receivables-backed revolving credit facility used to finance a pool of property leases for fully furnished one-to-three-bedroom apartments entered into by members of the Landing platform, in which the Fund holds a participation. In March 2024, a new loan tranche was originated by BasePoint Capital with a two-year revolving period and a final maturity of December 2026. The facility's advance rate is set against a multiple of the monthly rent profit, including standby revenue, of a pool of apartments (for Standard Homes) and the annualized gross profit, including standby revenue, (for Autopilot Homes) and is enforced through a monthly borrowing base.

Investment Rationale

The Company's offering is particularly attractive to remote U.S. workers due to their ability to move freely throughout its network of units. The majority of the Company's work traveler customers are healthcare professionals, whom in particular, face a higher demand for travel. The CEO and founder (who leads the management team today) previously founded an online delivery marketplace that sold to Target for $550 million in 2017. Our loan performance projections, which are based on management's expected financial performance, indicate that the units are expected to produce adequate cash flows to service and support the senior credit facility.

During the fourth quarter, the portfolio experienced higher than expected delinquencies primarily due to third party consolidation activities and poor performance stemming from an individual broker channel. The Company has since layered in protective policies and underwriting guidelines addressing each issue and expects performance to come back in line with our modeling. We continue to actively monitor portfolio performance through our weekly data collection and borrowing base process.
